Did you know that...?

IQcoloring.com

Seahorses can move each eye independently, allowing them to watch two different directions at the same time.
One eye can search for tiny prey nearby while the other keeps watch for possible danger.
Their curled prehensile tail lets them hold tightly onto marine plants while calmly watching their surroundings.

